

Mark Robyn

Mark Robyn is Staff Economist at the Tax Foundation, a nonpartisan tax policy research and education organization. He conducts research on a variety of federal and state tax policy issues. His research has focused on various subjects such as the alternative minimum tax, the earned income credit, and the child credit. Mark has also aided in the development of the Tax Foundation's federal income tax computer simulation. Mark holds a B.S. in applied mathematics from Geneva College.